A: You should probably use a more recent version of `chmod` to change the permissions. `chmod` has changed over the years and I believe current version will error with the path you have tried. Have you done a full reinstall of linux? Here is a fix using options to `chmod` `sudo chmod +r`

`/path/to/your/home/folder` Cafarnaum Cafarnaum, also spelled cafarnawm or cafarnawm (from West Cumbria dialect kafarno, meaning "the kitchen") is a village and community in the Eden district of the county of Cumbria, England. It lies from Carlisle, from Aikton, from Workington, from Kirkby Stephen and from Grange-over-Sands. The population of the village is included in the civil parish of Grange-over-Sands. The village was historically one of the principal centres of the Eden valley's pottery industry, home to numerous kilns. These are now protected buildings and several remain in use. The civil parish includes the hamlets of Chapel-en-le-Frith and West Heslington. Cafarnaum has a Working Men's Institute, a social club and village shop and the village hall. Cafarnaum is twinned with the town of Toulouse in France. History Name The village was recorded as Caerneawm in 1220, Caerneawem in 1279, Cayerneawm in 1291, and Caernaoum in 1624. It has been anglicised to cafarnawm or caffarnawm in modern times and to cafarnawm-by-the-Sea since the late 19th century. Archaeology Cafarnaum was the site of extensive Roman activity, including an ancient fort. The name "Cafarnaum" is a Latinised version of the Cumbric word for "kitchen", first recorded in 1279 as Caerneawem. It has been suggested that the name "Cafarnaum" derives from the Latin for "pottery workshops", although this is unlikely as by this time the local area was almost entirely taken up by the pottery industries. The site was discovered in 1858 by farmers who noticed a circular area of land surrounded by a hedge with a ditch (now
